Rebuilding Puerto Rico: A Cross-Disciplinary Dialogue Regarding How Best to Address Puerto Rico’s Humanitarian and Economic Crises
Puerto Rico’s economic and disaster recovery will require a coalition from across disciplines and industries from the public and private sector, state and federal governments, the business community, non-profits and NGOs, educational institutions, scientists, artists, and the press, working together, to rebuild Puerto Rico. Hear from those on the front lines about the current status of Puerto Rico as well as Congress and the Administration’s current position on Puerto Rico’s disaster relief and economic relief packages, proposed revisions to PROMESA and the HNBA’s advocacy efforts to ensure that Puerto Rico’s voice is heard and rights are protected. Hear also about the vital role that lawyers are playing in the recovery, including the HNBA’s joint efforts with the ABA, LCJS, LSC and local Puerto Rican pro bono organizations to mobilize attorneys to provide pro bono legal services for Puerto Ricans, both on and off the island—a caseload so large that experts estimate that it will take more than a decade to work through.

NEUROLAW: How Brain Science Can Make You a Better Lawyer

Neurolaw is an interdisciplinary field that links the brain to law and also helps facilitates better understanding of human behavior through neuroscience achievements and research. Since the late 90s, this emerging field has led to more precise explanations for human behavior that can be used first to understand and improve ourselves in our leadership roles as well as to also comprehend the functioning of the brain in decision-making and the practice of law. This presentation will provide a brief introduction to neurolaw and the different areas that can benefit lawyers both in their personal lives and in their professions.

BITCOINS & BLOCKCHAINS & CRYPTOTECHS, OH MY! Demystifying the World of Virtual Currency and Distributed Ledger Technology, and Understanding How They Are Changing the World as We Know It
Cryptocurrency emerged rapidly from the Dark Net into mainstream commerce. Distributed ledger technology, the engine that powers cryptocurrencies like bitcoin, has the potential to have even more widespread and lasting impact, including its application to distributed payment platforms, smart contracts, supply chain management tools, internet of things security, alternative to the Swift network for interbank payments, and even the use of blockchain-based payment platforms to raise capital through ICOs (“Initial Coin Offering”). State and federal lawmakers and enforcement agencies have tried to keep up, but have imposed what many believe are overly-restrictive constraints and burdensome penalties on companies attempting to innovate solutions with these technologies. This panel will discuss the current state of cryptocurrency and distributed ledger technology, where the technology is headed, forecasts regarding statutory and regulatory developments in these areas, and the recent advisory opinions from the SEC regarding ICOs and other related issues.

SCANDAL: Practical Tips for Managing Systemic Risk and Surviving Corporate Crises in the Digital Age
Despite its numerous upsides, the ubiquitous use of technology (including internal IT as well as social media) exposes Corporate America to myriad new regulatory, litigation and reputational threats, which many corporations are ill-equipped to manage. Recent scandals involving companies such as GM, Equifax and United Airlines demonstrate this heightened risk and highlight the critical role of in-house lawyers in identifying and managing systemic risk and responding to corporate crises. This program will discuss some of the higher profile corporate scandals and discuss the critical failures in each instance, along with the role of corporate counsel in each instance, and provide practical guidance and strategies for issue-spotting potential threats and how to both prevent and handle major crises within your organization.

CYBERSECURITY SPY CRAFT: The Next Wave of Cybersecurity Threats and Cyber Risk Management from a Global Perspective
Nation state cyber attacks are no longer the sole concern of intelligence agencies and the military. In the past five years, hackers associated with North Korea, Russia, China among others have targeted companies and individuals with devastating effects. The emergence of high end cyber weapons deployed against commercial and private companies is now a fact of life. Our panel will discuss the challenges companies face from these well-organized hackers who variously use exploits in technology and the human factor to penetrate networks. All of this against a backdrop of increasingly demanding regulatory and legal requirements at the federal and state level. The response, as our panel will discuss is a combination of enterprise risk management and focusing on detection, resilience and recovery.

The panel features speakers with deep and long-standing cybersecurity experience including Guillermo Christensen, chair of Brown Rudnick’s cyber practice and a former CIA intelligence officer, diplomat, and life member of the Council on Foreign Relations; Miguel Sciancalepore, an experienced Microsoft technology attorney with cybercrime experience; and Steven Grimberg, a former federal prosecutor who served as a National Security Cyber Specialist with the U.S. Department of Justice and is now with Nardello & Co., a global investigations firm. THE GREAT CANNABIS BOOM?
Understanding How Lawyers Can Help the Cannabis Industry Navigate the Complex Intersection Between Federal & State Law and Secure the Funding Needed to Grow
On January 1, 2018, California, the largest marijuana market in the world, will join Washington DC and 7 other states that have legalized recreational marijuana use, and 32 states and territories that have legalized medical marijuana use. In a few short decades, the cannabis industry will have evolved from an illegal product sold on street corners and back rooms, and a loosely-regulated and fractured cottage industry of small companies run primarily by industrious marijuana enthusiasts, to a projected $50 Billion highly-regulated industry by the year 2026. Despite the industry’s huge growth opportunity, many marijuana start-ups are failing because of the lack of access to funding and the inability to transact across state lines. Despite the federal government’s hands-off approach, few banks or VCs provide banking services or investment funding to cannabis businesses because marijuana is still a Schedule 1 drug at the federal level, and they are uncertain about whether and/or how the federal government may prosecute banks or investors who do business with them. This panel will examine how California’s new recreational marijuana laws and regulations will protect marijuana businesses that operate consistently with to existing federal laws and policies against federal prosecution, the law practice areas that will help drive the future growth of the U.S. based cannabis industry, and tips for our members how members can take advantage of opportunities to get in at the ground level create a law practice in this emerging and rapidly-changing area.

THE RISE OF THE MACHINES: From Chatbots to Robots, How AI Is Reshaping the Business and Practice of Law
The day is coming when artificial intelligence (“AI”) will play a role in nearly every aspect of the business of law, as well as the way that we practice law. Many predict that AI will completely transform the legal industry, with wide-reaching and potentially devastating impact on law firm profits, in particular. When this transformation comes, will your law firm or legal department be ready to adapt and leverage AI to its advantage? Or will it go the way of the dinosaurs? This panel will examine current uses of AI in the legal profession and industry leaders’ predictions about how this technology will transform the profession in the next 3–5 years. The panel will also discuss the potential risks posed by the utilization of AI in your business or legal practice, including various ethical considerations, regulatory issues connected to the issue of machine learning, IP protection for new AI developments, and privacy concerns arising from massive use of data and liability regimes.

A company’s failure to understand how much these obligations can vary depending on a case’s venue, or inside and outside counsel’s ongoing ESI obligations (which start even before a lawsuit has been filed), can cause even discrete ESI issues to quickly snowball into an avalanche of “discovery on discovery,” exorbitant discovery costs, and sanctions, including monetary judgments and adverse inferences. Innovating Solutions to Close the Latino Education Gap

A broad spectrum of public and private sector leaders will discuss how best to close the Latino Education Gap, one of the greatest challenges facing employers and one of the greatest threats to the health of the U.S. economy over the next 30 years. Currently, only 14.1% of U.S. Latinos age 25 and older have a bachelor’s degree (only approximately 64% have a high school diploma or equivalent). By 2020, 65 percent of jobs will require some postsecondary education or training beyond high school. If current degree attainment percentages remain static, the majority of the 38 million Latinos estimated to enter the workforce between now and 2050 will not have the education or training needed to fill the jobs of the future and the same time that the majority of Baby Boomers will be entering retirement. These dual demographic shifts will have devastating impact on our community and our economy, including widespread unemployment, diminished economic buying power amongst U.S. Latinos; and employers will not be able to tap into the domestic workforce to fill jobs with skilled workers needed to run their companies. This panel will discuss how the public and private sector are leveraging technology and innovation to quickly scale up programs to ensure that U.S. Latinos receive the education and skills training needed to compete for the jobs of the 21st century.

TC HEARTLAND: The Supreme Court’s Game-Changing Decision that Will Widely Impact Where and How Potent Infringement Cases Will Be Tried in the Future
The Supreme Court’s May 2017 decision in TC Heartland LLC v. Kraft Foods Group Brands LLC exponentially expanded the number of jurisdictions in which “venue” can now be claimed in patent infringement cases. District Courts and the Federal Circuit have grappled with this case since mid-2017, resulting in differing opinions on issues such as waiver of a venue defense, what it means for a company to have a regular and established place of business in a state, and whether the law should be applied statewide or on a district-by-district basis. This panel will explore these seemingly contradictory interpretations, and offer in-house counsel advice on how they can best avoid being sued in less favorable jurisdictions.

Latinas play a vital role in the U.S. workforce and society, making up one in seven female workers. Latinas are also vulnerable to changes in access to health care. In 2015, 20% of Latinas were uninsured, lagging behind white women (9%). Latinas are 17% of new HIV diagnoses for women and are two times more likely than their white counterparts to experience an unintended pregnancy. Since 2010, under the Affordable Care Act (ACA), health care coverage for Latinas expanded and required employers and universities to offer health insurance covering all FDA-approved contraception. On October 6, 2017, the Trump administration issued new “interim final rules”, creating a broad exemption for Latinas expanded and required employers, health insurance providers, and universities to claim a religious or moral objection to deny their employees, students, and insurance beneficiaries coverage for contraception. Although not finalized, on January 19, 2018 the administration again reiterated their support of the religious exemption, which has the potential to reduce access to contraception for thousands of women across the U.S. If finalized, these types of exemptions and limits to reproductive care create new health barriers that can impact the advancement of Latinas who have some of the lowest levels of educational attainment, with only 19% completing a college degree.
