Poder25: GC-Nexter By Invitation Only

Poder25 supports a separate class of in house counsel ("GC Nexters") who are two to three levels down from their general counsel. This group will receive comprehensive support from HNBA VIA through a professional development program focused on helping them clarify their goals and priorities, and developing stronger awareness of themselves and their potential to, at a minimum, move upward to the GC Ready group by 2025.

8:30 AM - 5:00 PM

Poder25 GC Ready By Invitation Only

The overarching goal of Poder25 by 2025, is to position 20 Latinx legal executives participating in the program ("GC Ready") to be placed as global general counsel in the Fortune 500 ("F500") that have adopted the global law department design and service model to support their global businesses, or, with respect to the F500 that have adopted an alternative service model, position the GC Ready group to be placed in the general counsel role of the F500. HNBA VIA seeks to achieve this ambitious goal by providing the GC Ready group with transformative leadership, management and professional development tools that enable them to focus on reinventing themselves while developing the people below and around them to create other leaders.

The Art of Successful Lawyering Track – Panel #1: Corporate Counsel and Diversity: Engaged or Invisible?

The legal profession, primarily through the efforts of the American Bar Association, the ABA Commission on Lawyer Assistance Programs and the National Task Force on Lawyer Well-Being, has in recent years identified some of the causes, effects and solutions to the extraordinary stress that we face as lawyers, judges and law students. Recent publications and a national well-being pledge campaign for legal employers carefully address what can be done to actively promote a healthier working environment. Nonetheless, there is little mention of the added stressors and cultural issues affecting Latin and other diverse lawyers, particularly in a highly competitive and demanding corporate law practice. Please join us and add your voice to this important and timely national discussion.

Hot Button Issues: Corporate Counsel Track – Panel #1: High Stakes for Employers: "Weeding Out" Risks

While an employer's right to maintain a zero-tolerance drug policy remains intact, companies operating across State lines must now comply with varying State-level cannabis regulations. Some of these regulations forbid employers from discriminating against hiring, terminating, or otherwise penalizing a person who uses marijuana. Generic "no-marijuana" policy language is under attack in many jurisdictions. How can employers in legal marijuana states protect themselves from legal risk? This panel will provide you with important answers to these questions.

In-house legal functions are undergoing a major transformation. The new paradigm is client-centric and oriented toward data and metrics, and provides holistic, integrated solutions that advance client/customer objectives. Legal teams will need to be proactive and invest in training for the new skills required in a rapidly changing employment landscape. No longer will they be allowed to separate the world into lawyers and 'non-lawyers,' nor will they elevate legal expertise over other competencies required to drive efficient legal support.

Sink or Swim: Public Interest/Government Waters Track – Panel #3: Rights in conflict: Religious Freedom v. Anti-Discrimination

Hobby Lobby has been a flashpoint for the use of religious exemptions by businesses, pitting the rights of the individual against the rights of an entity. Long before Hobby Lobby, the Religious Freedom Restoration Act sought to allow religious expression free from federal intrusion. But as Hobby Lobby and Masterpiece Cake illustrate, the Supreme Court has accepted that these types of religious liberty challenges can stand at the expense of women's reproductive rights and LGBT Rights. If exemptions are to be available to those who object to contraception and marriage equality, on what principle would exemption claims based on beliefs about race be distinguished from claims based on beliefs about gender? What are the contours of the asserted rights at stake, and how might they affect the way we do business? How will government institutions and the courts balance whose rights and what beliefs take precedence?

Hot Button Issues: Corporate Counsel Track – Panel #3: Emerging Compliance Issues for Corporate Counsel

This panel will address various emerging compliance issues facing corporate counsel. On the FCPA compliance front, growing foreign direct investment (FDI) in the US counsels in favor of updating compliance programs for companies in the US that don't typically deal in a foreign context. In the labor and employment space, new privacy regulations in Europe (GDPR) will require US companies with operations in Europe to store information of European citizens (and employees) differently requiring a new compliance framework for global companies. Additionally, in that same space, diversity & inclusion is an emerging topic in compliance as well.

HNBA LATINA COMMISSION PLENARY - Finding a Path to Success: Why Latina Lawyers Stay or Go?

This past fall the ABA embarked on a research project to identify the challenges faced by women of color in the legal profession. Building on the 2018 study, Achieving Long-Term Success, this new project looks at women of color who are at least 15-years out of law school to assess the unique career dynamics they face and help identify key personal and structural factors that foster or impeded their success in the legal profession. Join us for this critical discussion where we will hear from Latina lawyers from all areas of the profession who are forging their own career trajectory to success. Hear why they stayed, moved or considered leaving, and what are unique challenges Latinas face.

Sink or Swim: Public Interest/Government Waters Track – Panel #4: Amicus Briefs: Influence and Impact

In the last decade, record numbers of briefs have been filed with the Supreme Court. On average, the Court will receive over 700 amicus briefs each term, which is twice the number of briefs submitted to the Supreme Court in the 1990s, and twelve more than submitted in the 1940s-50s. Amicus briefs are becoming an effective way to influence not just the Supreme Court but also lower Federal Courts and State Supreme Courts, amicus briefs are also being used to address arguments that fall outside the narrow scope of issues in a case or to provide a unique perspective on the impact a case will have on certain segments of the nation. During this panel, our speakers will discuss the role of amicus briefs in key civil rights cases over the last decade and the undeniable impact amicus strategies are having on how matters are argued before the Supreme Court and how they are at times, leveraged by media to shape the court of public opinion. Our panelists will also weigh in on how the evolving makeup of the Supreme Court could affect legal advocacy in the years to come.

Sink or Swim: Public Interest/Government Waters Track - Panel #5: Unchartered Waters: Who is Steering the Ship?

Whether you're in the private or public sector, federal agencies rule your world; and under the current administration, the structure and rule-making processes of key federal agencies have been unpredictable at best. The Department of Health and Human Services is seeing a flood of proposed rules, new oversight units, and a shift in operations and program priorities, while others like the Environmental Protection Agency are suffering from reduced staffing, underenforcement, and a mandate to deregulate. In addition to these challenges, there are proposals to reorganize, shift, and privatize key agencies, and an unprecedented use of administrative law to rewrite the purpose and effectiveness of critical governmental bodies. Through a discussion about the changes in key agencies, speakers will attempt to shed light on the long-term effects of this brand of leadership and rulemaking and its potential impact on all sectors of society.
